MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

College of Arts & Letters

E N G A G I N G T H E W O R L D

Students in the College of Arts and Letters explore human expression, experience, and values through a wide variety of subjects including the creative and performing arts, languages and literature, art history, philosophy, and religious studies, as well as the interdisciplinary fields of American studies, classical studies, humanities, humanities pre-law, and women's studies.

Undergraduate Education

Our undergraduate academic programs foster critical thinking and creativity, communication skills, flexibility, cross-cultural awareness, and civic responsibility. Students learn to think independently and engage in active inquiry; they learn to ask questions and to pursue new ways of integrating multiple kinds of knowledge. In the process, they gain self-knowledge and strengthen their understanding of their role as citizens of a global community. They become creative problem-solvers, prepared to tackle the challenges of the twenty-first century.

Graduate Education

Graduate programs in the College of Arts and Letters produce scholars, researchers, and teachers adept at negotiating the depth and breadth of their disciplines as well as the interconnections among disciplines. Graduate students are welcomed into a supportive community of scholars that provides a congenial environment in which to study and pursue research for theses and dissertations.
